Blended learning

Learning in a blended way helps you to develop the digital skills needed for the digital workplace.

The world is fast becoming more digital-focused with hybrid working becoming a permanent feature for many businesses across the globe. We aim to ensure skills and competencies to achieve course learning revolution.

How does blended learning work?

Blended learning combines live online learning with means students can balance studying in and around other commitments whilst also building friendships and joining a community both live online and on-campus.

Blended timetables will typically follow one of the below:

Daytime students – you will have two days of tuition online.

Evening and weekend students – you will have two evenings of live online study and one weekend day of face-to-face learning on-campus, or two evenings face-to-face on campus learning and one weekend day live online.
